Rep. Tracy Unveils New Website, www.reinventillinois.com, Seeking Citizen Input on State's Fiscal Problems

Quincy, IL...State Representative Jil Tracy (R-Mt. Sterling) and the House Republicans have unveiled a newly created website, www.reinventillinois.com, asking local residents for ideas, suggestions and solutions to reform State government spending, cut waste and improve efficiencies in State government programs.

"The newly launched website, www.reinventillinois.com, is an effort to gather public input on the State budget process and state government from the people it is supposed to serve," said Rep. Tracy. "Often, the best solutions come from hardworking, everyday folks. These are the people who use state services or work in state facilities and they see firsthand how our government functions. The purpose of the website is to learn where they think the state could do a better job managing their tax dollars."

Reinventillinois.com is the most recent effort by Rep. Tracy and the House Republicans to gather the public's insights and concerns about the direction of state government. Representative Tracy will use your suggestions and input when returning to Springfield this week to deal with the unfinished budget for Fiscal Year 2010.

"We want to provide a tool that allows you to voice your thoughts on where to cut waste from state government, make needed changes to the way our state manages finances and return Illinois to the business friendly state it once was," said Tracy. "For the last six years the State Leadership has overspent Illinois into a multibillion dollar deficit with little to no accountability. It is long past time to change those irresponsible practices, and your ideas to make Illinois more efficient are the best place to start."
